Inflation-linked rental growth

Investment Thesis

A new lease of life secured for the next two decades. Parkway Life Real Estate Investment Trust (PREIT) has surpassed expectations with the renewal of the Singapore hospitals' master lease that comes with a c.40% rent increment, 27% rise in NAV, and 20-year extension of the lease tenure. While trading at a premium of 2.4x P/NAV, we believe PREIT's growth story remains intact with catalysts in the pipeline. BUY!

Staying Singapore-centric, with "renewed" ROFR on Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital. The ROFR on Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital has been "renewed" for 10 years, implying PREIT's intention to remain Singapore-centric and the committed support that its sponsor lends.

Third pillar of growth. PREIT's management believes that it is timely to look at building a third pillar for the company's next growth phase, which, we think, would be in matured markets.

Valuation:

Maintain BUY, raised TP to S$5.75. Our DCF-derived target price (TP) of S$5.75 is based on a weighted average cost of capital (WACC) of 4.7% and terminal growth of 2.9%. We have factored in the renewal of the master lease and assumed new acquisitions worth S$25m.

Where we differ:

A new chapter of growth. We believe the rental upliftment from the renewal of the master lease marks the start of a new chapter of growth. PREIT is now in a better position of focusing on inorganic growth via i) asset recycling strategies, ii) venturing into a new market (third pillar), and iii) exercising ROFR from its sponsor.

Key Risks to Our View:

Currency risks. PREIT derives c.40% of its earnings from healthcare assets in Japan and is exposed to foreign exchange (forex) volatility.

WHAT'S NEW

Inflation-linked rental growth

Result Highlights – FY21 DPU grew 2.1% y-o-y, contributed by higher rents, offset by depreciation of JPY, and one-off allowance for doubtful debts; cost of debt at all time low of 0.52%.

- PLife REIT reported 4Q21 DPU of 3.57Scts, flat y-o-y.
- FY21 DPU grew 2.1% y-o-y to 14.08Scts, in line.
- 4Q21 and FY21 NPI grew 2.1% y-o-y and 1.0% y-o-y, respectively, led by higher rents received from the Singapore hospitals (4Q21 NPI: +1.7% y-o-y; FY21 NPI: +1.2% y-o-y). This was largely supported by the inflation-linked rental review of Singapore (+1.66% from Aug 21) but offset by lower contributions from assets divested, depreciation of JPY, and a one-off allowance for doubtful debts (Japan assets).
- Gearing stayed relatively stable q-o-q, at 35.4% (vs. 34.9% as at Sep 21). All-in cost of debt continues to decline q-o-q, though marginally, at 0.52% (0.53% in 3Q21).
- Post terming out a short-term loan drawn to fund the Japan acquisitions in 2H21, PLife REIT does not have any debt refinancing needs until Jun 23, sheltering it from rising interest rates in the near term. Weighted average debt term improves to 3.9 years from 3.4 years (as at Dec 21).

Outlook

Singapore hospitals to grow at 2% to 3% from Aug 22 to Dec 25; Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital a potential acquisition target

- PLife REIT continues to deliver steady returns with a high degree of income visibility from its Singapore hospitals, which contribute c.60% of the top line. Rental revisions are pegged to a CPI-linked formula, which underpins a steady growth profile for PLife REIT.
- Post the renewal of the master lease, rents are guaranteed to increase by 2% (interim period from Aug 22 to Dec 22) and 3% (FY23-FY25) from Aug 22 onwards.
- An annual rent review formula shall be applicable from FY26 with an estimated c.25% step up in rents.
- Concurrently to the renewal of the master lease, PLife REIT's sponsor, IHH Healthcare has granted a 10-year ROFR on Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital. Given the successful collaboration between PLife REIT and its sponsor, we believe the potential injection of Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital could be realised someday. In a previous media interview, the CEO of IHH Healthcare said that IHH will do a portfolio review and may consider asset recycling and divestments of assets in areas that they do not foresee good cluster growth, and utilise the capital to grow other assets. While this does not directly imply that Mount Elizabeth Novena Hospital is up for divestment, at least its sponsor is now open to asset recycling and divestments.

Recycling of Japanese assets continues to deliver growth

- In FY21, PLife REIT acquired three nursing homes in Japan for a total of S$87.3m at a net property yield of 5.7% to 5.9%.
- In Jan 21, it finally sold its non-core asset, P-Life Matsudo, the only pharmaceutical product distributing and manufacturing facility within its Japan portfolio, for S$37.2m at a divestment yield of 4.3% (vs. 5.3% of acquisition yield) and 12% above the original purchase price.
- Asset recycling activities have been sporadic. With the acquisition made in December 2021, we believe asset recycling exercises will continue to drive growth ahead, given its successful track record, but the timing remains uncertain.

Building a third pillar for the next phase of growth

- As its Japan assets have grown to a decent size, contributing c.40% of the group's gross revenue, management believes it is timely to look into building a third pillar for PLife REIT (in addition to asset recycling and the acquisition pipeline from its sponsor) for its next growth phase.
- Management continues to explore opportunities in developed countries with a mature healthcare market and believes that there could be potential options in Australia and Europe.
- However, management remains cautious on new ventures and hence, the timing of a potential entry is uncertain.

Parkway Life Real Estate Investment Trust

Maintain BUY; TP of S$5.75

- We continue to like PLife REIT for its strong earnings visibility, which is a positive attribute, especially with the currently volatile and uncertain market outlook.
- We maintain our BUY rating and a TP of S$5.75, despite the current lower dividend yield during the downtime period post the renewal of leases.
- A further upside to our forecasts stems from the rollout of more asset recycling exercises in Japan, and acquisitions of earnings-accretive hospital assets in Singapore or overseas.

Company Background

Parkway Life REIT (PREIT) is one of Asia's largest listed healthcare REITs. It invests in income-producing real estate and real estate-related assets used primarily for healthcare and healthcare-related purposes.
